

The Ty'Zen Times

Hi!

This year, I've been trying to be mindful of not being a perfectionist about things, in order to deliver work instead of dwelling in the production phase. As a result, I rushed through last week's newsletter, and you may have received a version with typos. I'm not saying it'll never happen again (because I'm human), but I will try to reduce the likelihood of it recurring.

I wanted to get this newsletter to you on Tuesday, but this week has been a difficult one for me. I can't quite put my finger on how I feel; but I know that I'm feeling a lot of different things. I've been coping with losing several loved ones this year, and my grandmother is currently ill. I'm getting nervous about everything coming up in my life. I'm also in my head about this music rollout because I have hard deadlines and I've already missed a few.

I got some great news this week that solved a laundry list of issues; so, I've got a green light to move forward on a lot of projects (including a virtual Christmas showcase in December and my book being published in March). It was great to receive some positive news, so I'm really excited about that but a bit overwhelmed with everything else.

I know we're all facing so much these days, but I hope you're maintaining and doing well. Considering the times, I think the songs on the upcoming album will resonate with you. I'll be able to confirm the official release date soon.

"I'm Alive" is out now! How do you feel about it? I made a promo video that's worth a view. I'm hoping to have the music video completed next week.

I'm also thinking about going live on Instagram next week too, maybe to preview some of the songs and talk about the project. What do you think about that?

I love you.

Blessings,
Ty'Zen
