

The Ty'Zen Times

Yo!

Just a few updates! I was looking forward to going on IG Live this week to preview songs and talk about the album...but I have Laryngitis. We will get together as soon as I'm well enough. By the way, my grandmother is feeling a bit better but needs a bone marrow transplant. Thanks for your prayers and positive energy.

Because I lost my voice on Tuesday, I couldn't perform at OTP Live on Tuesday night, as intended. However, since the rehearsals went so well, I was invited to perform at all future shows.

The visual for "I'm Alive" is on the way. Travelling and being ill this week delayed its completion. I used to watch a lot of emo-rock and goth-garage band music videos. The concept of this video was inspired by those with a campy horror film twist. When my sister first heard the song, she said it sounded like it belonged on the soundtrack for the Queen of the Damned movie. The song definitely has a haunted feel, so I wanted to highlight that while still celebrating the thrill of getting back to yourself after surviving a difficult time. I hope the video makes you smile.

Happy October! We're now in the final quarter of the year. It will be a very busy month for me. I may seem distant as I'm wrapping up several things, but you'll also see me pushing things out. After the "I'm Alive" video, pre-save/pre-add/pre-sale for the album begins, the second single drops, and then the album will be released.

Let me know if you have any suggestions, or if you need anything from me. I really hope you're doing well. Have a great weekend!

I love you.

Blessings,
Ty'Zen
